ers of this state.

We regret to notice that the same drouth that has prevailed in our own immediate section here, and which has so mediate section here, and which has so nearly destroyed all prospects for a crop of hay and oats, has likewise prevailed along our southern border and inflicted great damage, if not total failure, upon the crops named. A gentleman who has made a trip through Randolph, Pocahe found the country very dry and suffering sadly for the lack of rain. He says that there will be fine crops of wheat and rye, but corn, oats and grass will be nearly a failure. a failure. The meadows through all the country that we traveled, looked very brown, as though they were nearly burned to death. We think there are but few, it any, that will turn off one fourth their usual crops will turn off one-fourth their usual crops of grass. In some parts of the country the corn has a very healthy color, but is very short; and we feel confident that we did not see a single field of oats over three inches high." Another person writing from Lewisburg, Greenbrier county, on June 15th, to the Upshur County Delta, says that times are very hard in that locality, and prospects immediately ahead not encouraging Corn is worth one dollar per bushel and scarce at that. The correspondent states that he has never seen so many men "car rying empty sacks under their arms as

"Few have any grain to sell, and what "Few have any grain to sen, and what little they can spare they are compelled to sell on credit, as there is a great scarcity of money. Times don't seem to be at their hardest yet. Half the meadows are only good pasture, and a great many not only good pasture, and a great many not gave some clothes and jewlery as securitant. The continental wine growers have kept the market steadilg supplied with enormous quantities of Hock, Chablis, Sauterne, Clarets, Bur-gundies and Champagnes at exceedingly Portugese wines, of which the entire pro-duction is inadequate to the consumption of New York or London, to say nothing of that of other large cities. As a matter of fact there is scarcely any unadulterated Port or Sherry to be had anywhere at any time; and although the Clarets and Burgundes are only adulterated with much difficulty, that result will probably follow the excessive demand unless the was, you can depend on that where of other countries supplement that the was properly the wasted them, and he took supply. There is necessarily plenty of competi-tion for so valuable a trade, but at the same time there is practically no competitor whose chance is equal to that of the California grower, for the simple reathe California grower, for the simple reason that the wines he has to offer are son that the wines he has to offer are similar in kind and frequently superior in quality to those already in possession of the market. Greece, Italy, Hungary, Abstria and Austrials are all wine producing countries, and their vintages have again and again excited the attention of the European trade. Italy, however, is at once put out of court by her oppressive duties, which prevent her growers from having any chance of success. The Austrian supply is too limited and the country too distant, and consequently the list is narrowed at once. Hungary is all over how much he enjoyed it; and the list is narrowed at once. Hungary the list is narrowed at once.
